

What we stand for.

AiNIN believe that art in nature implies respecting nature, not using or abusing it for the sake of art. This means a specific creation for each individual site whether it is in a rural, urban or social environment as an alternative for the traditional presentation of art objects in museums, galleries and public spaces.

What members get.

A platform of encounter for sharing and developing ideas and opportunities for artists, organisers and interested people. Calls for proposals for international art in nature events in the spirit of AiNIN, circulate regularly by email, to members, who can also exchange details of their achieved projects, ideas and experiences.

Every member has one image, a short statement, his/her email address and a personal website link on the AiNIN website. The website provides details of artists from the five continents in a variety of disciplines –visual art, performance, music, written media, video, etc.-, together with details of members organising art in nature events throughout the world.

The statement and image have to be sent to ainin@talktalk.net in the following formats: text of a maximum of 300 characters including spaces, and image in JPG/JPEG format (200x150 pixels).
